ORATORS TO HOLD FORTH IN EVERY HAMLET.

5,000 RALLIES IN THE CITY

slated for Present Week—Tammany Will Be Active—Official Washington Anxiously Awaits Outcome.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, Oct. 31.—If the plans of opposing managers do not miscarry, this, the closing week of the campaign in New York, will outstrip anything of the kind heretofore seen in this state. Virtually every city, town and hamlet of the state will hear the political orators. The activity will not be confined wholly to the two leading parties, for the independence league, the prohibitionists and the socialists are planning to wind up their campaigns in whirlwind fashion.

All the candidates on the republican state ticket will take the stump during the week. Many other leading men of the party, such as Senator Root and probably one or more members of President Taft's cabinet, will be heard at the republican rallies in the larger cities. Colonel Roosevelt's trip to Iowa will keep him away from the state for three days, but prior to his departure he will deliver two speeches in Greater New York. On his way home he will stop in Buffalo to speak in the final republican rally in that city on Saturday night.

According to the plans of State
Chairman Huppuch the democrats are

GOVERNMENT SITUATION IN NEW YORK.

Nominee John A. Dix.

to wage a much more lively campaign than has been carried on so far. Hundreds of meetings are to be held, under the auspices of the state committee and tens of campaign literature will be sent out from headquarters. Another feature of the concluding week of the campaign will be the visit of numerous political delegations to the home of John A. Dix, the gubernatorial candidate, in Washington city.

Among the prominent democrats who will stump the state this week, in addition to the candidates for office, will be Alton B. Parker, Thomas M.
Osborne, Augustus Thomas, D. Cady
Horner, Thomas P. Carmody, Herbert
P. Hissell and James H. Havens.

In Greater New York the campaign will be carried on at a record-breaking pace. Every day available hall in the city has been engaged by one or the other of the two parties for its meetings. Hundreds of automobiles will be used to whisk the spellbinders from one rally to another. It is estimated that not fewer than five thousand political rallies will be held in the five boroughs. Tammany will be ex-will be paid to the doubtful districts.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 31.—Official Washington is looking forward to the results of the election next week with many evidences of anxious interest.
President Taft is most largely concerned in the outcome of the congressional contest. He has been given to understand by some of the campaign managers that in case he does not have a democratic House on his hands after March 4 next he is very likely to have an insurgent republican House. It is this phase of the situation that is of most interest and concern to the President. He is particularly anxious that the next House shall not only be of his political faith, but also of his way of thinking on the important problems to come before the next congress. With a hostile body in the lower branch of congress the President may be frequently hampered in the prosecution of his policies.

TUBERCULIN TEST ABSOLUTELY SAFE SAY AUTHORITIES

Cattle Tested Are in No Danger of Acquiring Disease Says Dr. Ravenel of State Board.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 29.—Dr. Mazzyk P. Ravenel, director of the Wisconsin State Hygienic laboratory, scientific member of the Wisconsin State Livestock board, and called the greatest authority in the United States on the subject of livestock sanitation, takes issue with the farmers who profess alarm at tuberculin tests as applied to cattle. He intimates that those who suggest the possibility of tuberculin infection of cattle through the application of the tuberculin tests do not know what they are talking about, or as he puts it, they are "unscientific."

Dr. Ravenel was interviewed today in regard to the representations made by farmers before a committee of the Illinois legislature in which the farmers said there was great danger in the application of the tuberculin tests, which is applied in Wisconsin more than in any other state for the purpose of determining whether or not animals are afflicted with tuberculosis. The Illinois farmers expressed the belief that perfectly healthy cattle when subjected to the test acquired the disease.

Dr. Ravenel said: "The testimony given by some of the farmers before the legislative committee in Illinois is in distinct contradiction of scientific evidence over the entire world. No one who understands the manufacture of tuberculin could make such statements. Tuberculin is heated in live steam at 100 degrees centigrade for six hours. It is then filtered through a germ-proof filter, and before injection is diluted with solution of carbolic acid with which it is always in contact for at least a week before being used. It is, therefore, manifestly impossible for it to contain any germs."

"However, the facts do not rest alone on this evidence. Many of the finest herds in Wisconsin, such as those of Gov. W. D. Hoard and the university herd, are tested regularly and contain many tuberculin which have been injected with tuberculin over and over again, yet no tuberculosis has developed."

"Similar testimony can be produced in thousands of cases all over this country and all over Europe. Anyone who is interested in this subject can consult Bulletin No. 75 of the Pennsylvania department of agriculture, in which the late Dr. Leonard Pearson has collected answers from upwards of 500 farmers who had used tuberculin. The consensus of opinion is in favor of its use. There is no doubt that cows which have been injected with tuberculin will contract tuberculosis if exposed to infected cows. Just as cattle not infected with it, but the tuberculin has nothing whatever to do with this result. If the tuberculin is kept free from infection the injected cattle will not contract tuberculosis."

"In regard to the second point, that people have been made sick by drinking the milk of tuberculin-tested cattle, it is almost too absurd to require answer. Some well known herds as that of Mr. Francisco of New Jersey, which supplies milk to the best clientele in the city of New York, are tested year after year, yet no cases of sickness are reported from the use of milk. The same is true of the Walker-Gordon herds supplying to Boston, Philadelphia, New York and other large cities. In fact, these milks are used by physicians for the rearing of delicate and sickly children with the best possible results. The very fact that farmers are fighting the tuberculin test shows that they have some thing in their minds that they are afraid for the public to know about, but the consumers of milk have a right to demand protection against this terrible scourge."

"The work of the German commission, the English commission, and private work in this country has demonstrated beyond a doubt that many calves are infected by the milk of tuberculous cattle. The people are demanding milk from healthy herds and are entitled to have it. Scientific opinion, which is the result of years of careful study over the entire world, is back of this demand."

MEN OF BAPTIST CHURCH ENTERTAINED AT A SUPPER

Delightful Social Evening—Other News From Evansville.

Evansville, Oct. 31.—The supper given Friday evening under the management of the men of the First Baptist church brought together a company of between seventy and eighty and was a pronounced success. The scheme of decoration was suggestive of autumn, an ingenious use of corn stalks and pumpkins making an unusual and attractive display. The tables were decorated with Jack-o'-lanterns and ferns, and the supper which was prepared and served entirely by the gentlemen elicited much favorable comment from the guests. Rev. J. L. Taber made an excellent toastmaster. W. W. Gillies responded to "The Boys in the Sunday School," and H. O. Meyers gave an inspiring talk on "The Y. M. C. A." while "The Sermon of the Mowers" was the subject of a talk by B. H. Standish. A male quartette then sang and the remainder of a very pleasant evening was spent with games.

CEDAR RAILROAD TIES DESTROYED

St. Paul Road Sustained Loss of About $200 in Fire Near Hanson Factory.

Yesterday.

Fire yesterday afternoon destroyed between three hundred and four hundred ties, piled along the right of way of the St. Paul road in this city, near the Hanson factory. About one thousand cedar ties were laid along the tracks at the place where the fire occurred and but for work by the fire department all would have been destroyed. The fire was a most obstinate one to fight, the wind blowing from under and cracking and burning the ties. The department was handicapped too by the distance of the scene of the blaze from a fire hydrant. Eighteen hundred feet of hose had to be laid from the hydrant on North Third street near the gas plant to enable the firemen to throw water on the flames. The loss of the railroad company is estimated to be about two hundred dollars. No cause is known for the fire.

Built Upon the Sands, It Falls Not.

Although the new Pilgrim monument on Cape Cod is 253 feet in height and weighs 7,250 tons, ranking next to the Washington national monument as the loftiest structure of solid masonry on this continent, it has been set upon a hill of sand, and that too, with what the untitled might regard as a conspicuously inadequate foundation. Yet for all its location on the sand dunes at one of the most exposed points on the Atlantic coast it shows no vibration in the strongest gales that sweep over the extremity of Cape Cod, tests having been made when the velocity of the wind was in excess of 84 miles an hour.—Popular Mechanics.

SECRETS

"You told!" When Roberta hurled this denunciation at Eleanor she stood like a miniature colossus, with her ankles fast spread apart, her head upthrown. Her hair stuck out indignantly behind and the bow on top of her head fairly quivered with righteous wrath. Eleanor, sitting uncomfortably bolt upright in the hammock, felt herself quail, but she, too, held her head high. She was equally indignant because of Roberta's stupidity in not realizing that one had duties toward one's friends.

"I don't care!" she flung. "I don't care a bit about your old secret! I guess Milly was visiting me and I guess she had a right to know what I knew! Willie would just as soon as not she knew, even if he didn't think to say so!"

"Aw, you're a tattletale!" Roberta persisted. "Nobody was to know our secret but me and you and Willie and Jessie—and you went and told! Jessie wouldn't do it! I'm going down to play with Jessie!"

Eleanor sat and watched Roberta marching down the street, her hair bows still fluttering angrily. She watched until the lights had vanished and then she wept into the hammock pillows.

She knew what it meant for Roberta to scorn her. Roberta was a leader, so it meant ostracism and ostracism ate bitterly into one's soul. It was unjust, she felt, because surely it would not have been politic to bar Milly from the secret when Milly was her guest. It was just like being invited anywhere—you took your guest along, of course. Then, having a secret, why not share it with her? But it was very lonely on the porch by one's self, so Eleanor wept on.

She knew what was happening down at Jessie's. Roberta and Willie and some others were either painting magazine pictures or playing croquet. Or they were laughing and racing around the house, none of them giving a thought to her. They didn't care whether she was on earth or not. Maybe they had their heads together, giggling over another secret, a secret she had been so dearly loved to know. She had been so dearly loved to know.

She could hear Jessie giggle above all the rest and she felt that she hated Jessie. Though Jessie had a mild face and a way which made grown-up people say: "What a dear, sweet little girl!" Eleanor was morally certain that Jessie would just as soon as not tell any secret you had told her. Had not Jessie repeated to Eleanor everything she had promised her best chum not to tell?

It was dreadful to think that Willie probably was teaching Jessie that stroke in croquet which he had promised to teach Eleanor. Jessie would beguile Willie away if she could and Roberta, too, because she had always envied Eleanor's popularity.

For two or three days Eleanor wandered disconsolately up and down the street. When she went by Jessie's and the crowd was there they laughed very loudly and pretended not to see her. Once she met Roberta face to face and Roberta merely said "Pooh!" to her appealing glance. She met Willie and said "Hello!" feverishly, but he only stumbled over his feet and grew red.

"You told!" he called back to her after he had passed. Eleanor felt that life really was harder than she could bear. And it was all Jessie's fault. Jessie had told that Eleanor had told and now Jessie was reaping her reward, while Eleanor was out in the cold.

Then one morning Eleanor was electrified to see Roberta and Willie approaching the house.

"Hello!" Roberta said, airily. "Let's play store!"

"You can be storekeeper, Eleanor," Willie hastened to add. "I'll get you some potatoes for potatoes."

The two visitors vied with each other to woo back Eleanor, who received their advances in dignified mystification. It was hard not to let one's joyful relief surge out above one's studied reserve, difficult to show that one was injured, innocent and indignant and yet not too frigid. Above all, it was difficult to hide one's consuming desire to know what had happened.

It was nearly noon when Eleanor finally asked where Jessie was.

"Aw, Jessie!" said Roberta, in scorn. "We had a secret and crossed our three little fingers and promised not to tell—and she told her big brother!"

"Was it the same secret I told?" Eleanor asked, breathlessly. Roberta and Willie stared at each other a minute. Then Willie shook his head.

"No," he said, "I guess we've kinda forgot what that one was!"

Making Up One's Mind. Henry Van Dyke. We say that we "make up our minds" to do a certain thing or not to do it, to resist a certain temptation or to yield to it. It is true. We "make up our minds" in a deeper sense than we remember. In every case the ultimate decision is between two future selves, one with whom the virtue is harmonious, another with whom the virtue is disharmonious. To whom of these two figures, dimly concealed behind the action, we move forward. What we forget is that, when the forward step is taken, the shadow will be myself. Character is eternal destiny.

Curiosities in Fossil Beds.

The fossil beds of the west that have furnished such wonderful specimens of gigantic animals of former ages, such as, for instance, the dipodomys, replicas of which have recently been placed on exhibition in several of the great European museums, sometimes yield fossils, which, if not so large as the great animals mentioned above, are nevertheless of paramount interest to men of science. During the summer of 1909 the remains of several fossil turtles were collected by members of the United States geological survey, and from a study of these Prof. O. P. Hay has been able to describe eight new species of fossil turtles from west of the one-hundredth meridian.

ROOSEVELT IS SCATHED FOR ATTACK ON COURTS

President Butler of Columbia Sees Malice in Utterances of Former Chief Executive.

New York, Oct. 31.—In his address at the opening of Kent hall, the new law school of Columbia university, President Nicholas Butler seized the opportunity to scold Col. Theodore Roosevelt for the latter's recent utterances against judges and the courts.

President Butler referred to Senator Root's defense of Mr. Roosevelt's utterances on this subject and said:

"On Friday the junior senator from the state of New York made an important political speech, in which he stated in terms of precision and in a spirit of wisdom the function and the integrity of the courts in our American system of government."

"But I fear that in the enthusiasm of the moment he underestimated the persistency, the greatness of the malice and the cunning of those who war against them. It is one thing to analyze and to discuss in a scientific and judicial spirit the opinion of a great court; it is another thing to pour ridicule upon its membership and bring discredit upon the capacity and justice of its personnel in the presence of the shouting mob."

The coroner's jury held Mitchell and Bryant for murder and Mrs. Essie McCoy as an accessory.

Sibley, who has been in ill health for some time, has taken a turn for the worse, and it is said there is very little hope for his recovery. Dr. H. P. They ought to be a happy lot of people in the Isle of Tiree, in the West Highlands of Scotland. A special commissioner states that on the island there are 200 families who have never paid taxes nor rent of any kind. There have not been any increased premises for half a century, yet the island is dotted with distilleries.

Red Deer.

The winter home of the American red deer is very interesting. When the snow begins to fly the leader of the herd guides them to some sheltered spot, where provender is plentiful. Here as the snow falls they pack it down, tramping out a considerable space, while about them the snow mounts higher and higher until they cannot get out if they would. From the main opening, or "yard," as it is called, tramped out paths lead to the nearby trees and shrubbery which supply them with food. In this way they manage to pass the winter in comparative peace and safety.—St. Nicholas.

RAIL VICTORY MEANS STILL HIGHER RATES

Road's Representatives Admit to Abolition of Intention to Add to Increase—Plea Made for Burlington.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—The hope that a victory in their fight for increased freight rates will give them an opportunity to make still further advances is the reason given by the western railroads for the tenacity displayed in the battle they are waging before the interstate commerce commission.

This was admitted by C. G. Burnham, vice-president of the Burlington railroad, in charge of traffic, and by Attorney Davies, counsel of the road, at the hearing.

The admission was qualified, however, by statements that the increase asked for in the present hearing would only offset reductions that had been made by the commission in recent cases and that the further advances would furnish the roads the money declared necessary to meet ever-mounting expenses and the cost of needed improvements and equipment.

The advances asked at once would bring the Burlington about $400,000, Mr. Burnham stated, while the further increases would raise the amount to about $800,000. The position of the Burlington is the same as that of all the other roads involved, according to Mr. Burnham. He said that no increase in class rates, the broader field, was sought, the roads desiring only to increase the commodity rates. J. S. Peabody, statistician of the Santa Fe, testified that state traffic cost the road from two to five times as much to handle as interstate.

EDUCATE GARMENT WORKERS

Social Settlement Women Lead Their Aid to Chicago Strikers.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Five thousand more men and women have joined the ranks of the striking garment workers, according to an estimate made by the Garment Workers' district council. Strike leaders assert that fully 35,000 workers are now involved in the walkout.

Social settlement workers became important factors in the struggle as a result of a meeting held at Hull House. Among those present were Miss Jane Addams, Mrs. Raymond Hobbs, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin. The causes and effects of the strike were reviewed, and it was decided to form a women's citizens' committee for the purpose of lending aid to the striking garment workers.

One of the objects of the committee is to conduct a campaign of education for the benefit of the women on strike, with a view of teaching them that better conditions are obtained by workers through organization.

HORSES SLAIN BY EXPLOSION.

Nearly 100 Are Killed as Result of Steam Pipe Bursting.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—Nearly 100 horses were victims of an explosion of a fourteen inch steam pipe at a barn in the Union stock yards last night. The barn was used by Swift & Co. and Libby, McNeill & Libby for stabling heavy draft horses. The animals were said to be worth from $200 to $400 each.

The horses were either killed or so badly injured that they will have to be shot.

The cries of the horses could be heard above the din while the firemen worked hard to rescue them.

No persons were injured. The horses were killed or injured by the falling of heavy brick walls that toppled over as the explosion occurred. They were plunged down among the wagons below, about fifty of which were wrecked.

REVOLT IN URUGUAY SPREADS

Revolutionists Gradually Concentrate and Government Tatters.

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 31.—The revolutionary movement is taking on a serious aspect. There are now 10,000 armed revolutionists, who are gradually being concentrated. Several skirmishes have taken place, but the casualties have been suppressed.

Dr. A. Baez, the foreign minister, recently issued a manifesto declaring that the government was unable to prevent the revolution from spreading, because outside of the capital the sympathies of the people were entirely with the revolutionists. It was partly because of the influence of this manifesto that President Williams requested Baez's resignation.

The opposition papers predict that President Williams will be forced to resign.

CAPITOL DESK GRAFT TRIAL ENDS IN A DISAGREEMENT

Jury Stands Eight to Four for Conviction of Pemberton and Clark, Legislative Members.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 31.—The jury in the trial of State Senator Pemberton and Representative Clark on the charge of bribery in connection with the purchase of furnishings for the state legislature, reported to the court it was unable to reach an agreement and was discharged.

Although extremely reticent concerning their deliberations, it was learned that the first ballot of the jury stood six to six. After many hours of discussion one of the men changed his vote, making the result seven to five in favor of conviction. The final ballot taken before the men were dismissed stood eight to four for conviction.

The attorneys for the defense expressed themselves as well satisfied with the result of the trial and that on the next hearing of the case the defendants would each be acquitted. Judge Creighton of this city will hear the second trial of the case.

Following the discharge of the jury, State's Attorney Burke announced that an immediate hearing of the case will be had.

He expressed regret at not securing a conviction at this trial, but seemed confident of a different result at the next hearing.

EX-PREMIER FRANCO ARRESTED

Portuguese Official Under King Carlos Charged With Abuse of Power.

Lisbon, Oct. 31.—Senhor Franco, ex-premier of Portugal, who held office at the time King Carlos and Crown Prince Luis were assassinated in 1908, has been arrested on the charge of abuse of power during his incumbency. The government declared it did not inspire the arrest of Franco, but that it was the result of an investigation held by the judiciary.

Franco was released on bail fixed at $200,000.

The government has approved a decree granting the right to strike and has named a commission of arbitration to take labor disputes under advisement. Pale green and bright red have been adopted as the colors of the national flag.

Madrid, Oct. 31.—A special dispatch from Lisbon to the Correspondencia de Espana says a military conspiracy against the republic has been unearthed and that thirty-two officers have been arrested.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—After a desperate hand-to-hand encounter with a burglar who had entered his home at 2138 Fulton street, last night, Guy Williams, a solicitor for the Prudential Life insurance company, was shot and killed by the intruder.

Williams' wife and two young sons, covering behind a door but a few feet distant, saw in the dimly lighted room the struggle of the husband and father with the burglar. They saw the two men fight for mastery. They saw the flash of the revolver shot. The burglar jumped from a window and escaped.

Neighbors noticed an odor of gas and finally traced it to the Davis apartment, where the mother and two children were found dead in bed. A tube attached to an open gas jet was lying on Mrs. Davis' pillow. The two children were clasped in her arm.

AUTO STRIKES 4 BLIND GIRLS

Kansas City Lawyer's Car Inflicts Only Slight Injuries.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 31.—While walking across a street in Kansas City, Kan., four blind girls were knocked down, but only slightly injured, by a motor car driven by C. D. Sharp, an attorney of this city. The girls, Nellie Bulank, Elizabeth Roberts, Minnie Hedberry and Hannah Dugan, were in charge of a teacher from the Kansas School for the Blind.

Labor That Aids the World.

It is true that all wealth comes from labor, but not necessarily from labor by the hands. The thinkers of the world have added instinctively to its development. It was a portrait painter who invented the telegraph, a college professor who produced the telephone, and the list might be extended almost indefinitely. It is well that today, with all our indulgence in rest and play, that we remember that it is intelligently directed energy of whatever kind which makes man better and helps along the world to the millennial dawn.—Weekly Dispatch.

Where Caracas Comes From. Consul Luther T. Ellsworth writes from Ciudad Porfirio Diaz that Dr. C. C. Young has been experimenting in that Mexican district in the breeding of Caracas sheep, imported from Hokkaido in the far east. He has a flock of forty full-blooded animals. These sheep are famed for fine wool, which is in reality fur, and they are doing well in Mexico. The ranch on which they are grazing is ideal, as its hills are covered with never-failing grass in summer and its valleys are warm and have succulent growth in winter.

NOT SO MANY YEARS AGO.

"Eighteen years ago the democratic preached tariff for revenue and denounced the republican doctrine of protection to American labor, just as they are preaching and denouncing it now. Some republicans—number sufficient to make a majority—were convinced and the democratic tariff for revenue was tried.

"Business was demoralized.

"Millions of men were thrown out of employment.

"The farmers' market was destroyed.

"Women and children went hungry because the husbands and fathers could not find work.

"Men slept by night on the floor in the corridors of city halls, or in hay stacks or barns and by day they walked the city streets or the country highways pleading for the privilege of working at any wage or no wage except for something to eat.

"That was not very long ago.

"When the republican party came back into power in 1897 and the democratic tariff for revenue was wiped off the statute books, when the beneficent policy of protection was again put into operation, the condition of idleness and consequent want and misery was quickly changed to industry and prosperity and happiness, which has since continued.

"The democrats ask the people to try their scheme again.

"It is for you to say."—Canton Register.

"This scrap of history, so true to conditions, is of such recent date that many people should be able to recollect it, who seem to have forgotten it.

The experience of these hard times years come back to Senator Cummins of Iowa when he looked them squarely in the face and said, "Better 1,000 years of the Payne-Adair tariff law, than one term of democracy."

The senator remembered the Coxey army as it marched across the state of Iowa, on its way to Washington. He recalled the thousands of idle factories, and the great army of unemployed, composed of men who were not tramps, but honest, willing workers, simply begging for something to do at any wage.

We are told today that the success of the democratic party had nothing to do with these conditions, but that it was the tariff. When it became known that the party had captured the presidency and both houses of congress, confident, according to the tariff, that the tariff would be repealed.

a sinking ship. Seventy-three American railroads were in the hands of a receiver in 1893, and bankruptcy and failure were everyday experiences. Why? Because confidence was destroyed, and when this great bank of capital is demolished everybody suffers.

"The nation is threatened with another landslide which may prove equally disastrous. It is the one important issue, which many men have overlooked, as did Senator Cummins, but it is here, and the tariff and all other issues can afford to wait. Loyalty to the republican party is demanded in the interest of public welfare.

JUDGE BANCROFT'S CAMPAIGN.

Judge Levi H. Bancroft, the republican nominee for attorney general, has opened headquarters in Milwaukee, and will conduct his own campaign. The state central committee, and the organization which it represents, has repudiated his candidacy, and is supporting an independent candidate. The republicans of the state are confronted with a peculiar proposition, as a majority of them have been read out of the party by the organization which refused to support Judge Bancroft and also refused to recognize President Taft at their recent convention in Madison. Judge Bancroft, in speaking of the situation, says:

"I believe the republicans of this state like fair play. I am receiving hundreds of letters and newspaper clippings from all parts of the state denouncing the action of the state central committee and assuring me of support. Many of them go to the extent of saying that because of the unheard of action of the committee and the other candidates on the state ticket I am the only candidate on the republican ticket that they will vote for in this election. Certainly such a condition as this has never arisen before, where a political committee refuses to support a party nominee, and give as their only reason for supporting an independent that I was not on the original slate."

It is natural that Judge Bancroft should feel very keenly the insult offered him, but he will be elected with the rest of the ticket because the average republican votes straight and he will take no chances of turning the state over to democracy this year. Francis E. McGovern is well qualified to fill the office of governor, and Judge Bancroft is equally well equipped for the office of attorney general, to which he has been nominated. The state central committee made a mistake in refusing to recognize him and work with him.

AGRICULTURAL INSTRUCTION.

The railroads of the country are taking an active interest in the farmers and some twenty trains are now touring the country equipped with teachers in every line of agriculture. The New York Central takes a special interest in boys and is working in harmony with the agricultural college of Cornell University to interest the boys and keep them on the farm. The method of work is thus told by the Christian Herald:

"For many years, the New York State Agricultural College of Cornell University has made a practice of answering letters from school children, bearing inquiries on subjects relating to horticulture and natural history. These letters average thirty thousand a year and they come largely from youngsters of upper New York state. Most of the communications were until recently answered by Mr. Spencer, who signed his replies 'Uncle John.' Consequently 'Uncle John's' name is a household word in the rural parts of New York.

"President W. C. Brown of the New York Central railroad knew this and it was his idea to attach to the agricultural special sent out by his company a car equipped for the children's own in charge of 'Uncle John.' So, while the older folks crowd into the dairy car, the poultry car and the farm garden car, wherever the train stops, the children pile into the forward car of the train labeled 'Uncle John's Boys and Girls.' There they are greeted by a gray-haired man of the comfortable rotundity ascribed to St. Nicholas himself, and it is safe to assert that that particular car holds more nature enthusiasts than any other coach on the train.

"Catch 'em young. Get them on enthusiastic on farming topics while their minds are growing, and the next generation of railroad men won't have to bother about teaching agriculture." That is the way President Brown explained his reasons for providing instruction for the children.

The last week of the campaign promises to be a busy one in New York, Indiana, and several other states where the democrats are organized, but the fight in Wisconsin is confined to a few localities, and results will not affect the state ticket. The Milwaukee district may elect Berger, the socialist, for congress, but with the sentiment now prevailing this will not be surprising.

The Janesville-Madison interurban, which has so long kept people guessing, seems to have died a natural death. The expiration of the franchise leaves the field open and it is to be hoped that the Rockford company will take hold of the enterprise. The Janesville city road, which they now control, would make a good connecting link, and no new franchise would be necessary.

The steel manufacturers require their men to work seven days in the week, and some of them never know when Sunday comes. The injustice is at last recognized, and an effort is now being made by a committee of managers to place the business on a six day basis.

Chicago increased 25 per cent in volume of business, the first time of the year, over last year. The thirty buyer seems to have plenty of money to invest in any market but his home town, forgetful of the fact that many of the articles purchased do not represent value received.

The city of Tokio, Japan, has a population of 2,386,073, just a few hundred more people than Chicago.

THE POET PHILOSOPHER
By WALT MASON.
(Copyright, 1909, by George Matthews Adams.)

When things go wrong and I get mad, and all the world seems grim and end, do not let my gloomy mood bring THE SAFE PLAN gloom into my neighborhood. I do not snarl and snap at folks who don't deserve malicious frowns. I have a scheme that's really slick, and it relieves me pretty quick. You've heard of Gessler, that old soul who hung his lid upon a pole? When I feel mean I clutch his frame, the way I read him in a shape. "That blamed old Gessler," I remark, "he was a pirate and a shark; he'd rob a widow of her shoe, or steal the whistlers from a coat, or burn a church or kill a cop, or burglarize a blacksmith shop. Such men as Gessler should be drowned, or locked up in the village pound, or boiled in tar and kerosene, or drawn and quartered on the green. I have no use for any chump who hangs his lid upon a stump, expecting folks like William Tell to get down at his knees and yell." When I've abused old Gessler thus, and rubbed a nice and harmless fuss, I feel as genuine as though I'd brought a lot of grief to those around me, so, my lad, abuse old Gessler when you're mad!

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

A MODERN INSTANCE.

This is the plain, true story of Ruth's undoing.

Tired of clerking in a country store, Ruth S. went to Chicago at the age of eighteen.

The girl found employment in a garment factory, where she made skirts at 35 cents apiece.

Apt and skillful with her hands, Ruth was able by close application to make six or seven skirts a day, thus earning as much as $14 per week—sufficient for her modest needs.

After a time the factory reduced the price for making skirts to 30 cents each. Ruth simply worked harder and was still able to make her $14.

Then later came a further reduction to 25 cents per garment. There was much strife and a strike was talked of. Some of the girls quit. What became of them has nothing to do with this story.

A year later the managers of the factory further reduced the price to meet competition, they said—to 20 cents per skirt. And later still the price went down to 15 cents—the lowest sweatshop figure.

Ruth was driven almost to desperation. The cost of living had gone up, as the wages went down. She strained every energy to earn enough to pay her living expenses.

She contrived pitiful economies, often going without noonday lunch and was faint because of the lack. She had frequent headaches and was very nervous. Because of the overstrain and falling strength the poor girl, though she did her best, was slowly breaking. She could scarcely sleep because of worry.

Then one day she said something had snapped inside of her head.

"Warn out, body broken and heart broken, at the age of twenty-three, Ruth went insane."

That is all.

The story is true and it is typical of thousands such—thousands of honest, pure, hard working country girls whom the city has swallowed up into its ravenous maw and then, having sucked their innocent blood or killed their souls, has spewed them out, broken and impotent wrecks of womanhood.

The pity of it!

I told Ruth's story to a wealthy man, and when I said she was in an insane asylum, he remarked:

"Yes, another public charge. That is what makes our taxes so high."

Cures Coughs

After Ordinary Preparations

Fall—Wonderful New Mixture Made at Home.

An investigating chemist of national reputation just recently discovered in a compound known to the ancient world as "rescue" mentha-olus, a most wonderful virtue as a cough, hoarse, croup, and asthma remedy. The best part of it is, it can be made at home about 8 times cheaper than you can buy a bottle of cough syrup. It immediately relieves the several cases of asthma, bronchitis, coughs and chronic colds on the lungs, and it effects a cure, too, because it has a laxative action when 8 to 10 doses are taken daily. In very short order it will loosen the tightest grip, and you can feel it "taking hold" in its curative action. Obtain of the drug-ist, or have him order from wholesale firm 25c. Send full up the bottle, and empty it into a pint bottle. Make a syrup with a pint of sugar and a half pint of boiling water, stir and let cool. Then fill up the bottle with syrup, and seal with cork. It is very pleasant to take.

Advice for Young Ladies.
It is superfluous to decorate women highly for early youth; youth is itself a decoration. We mistakenly adorn most that part of life which least requires it, and neglect to provide for that which will want it most.—Hannah More.

What Makes A City?

Principally:---The Fostering of Home Industries and Manufactures. The Increase of the Pay Roll

"These are the 'needful' not only to increase a city's growth, but the entire surrounding country. 'Have you ever thought of that?'"

"Do you help to foster 'Home Industries'?" Are you proud of the fact that local manufactured goods are superior to any other, and that the name of your city goes hundreds of miles from home to be welcomed by thousands of individuals? Do you always buy Janesville Made Goods?

"Many people vouch for the superiority of goods manufactured in Janesville and with good reason."

The above is taken from The Gazette's "Buy It in Janesville" page and very conclusively gives the basic foundation needed in the building for a greater Janesville.

While this is so, many people, perhaps unconsciously, do not always ask for Janesville made goods and that is not as it should be. If you will remember next time to ask for Janesville made goods you will have reason to be pleased with your purchase, both from a standpoint of civic pride and the quality of the goods you'll get.

Many of the industries of this city could be made two and three times as large merely by the purchasing public's asking for and getting Janesville made goods. This would result in an increased demand that would necessitate a larger working force, a larger output and consequently an added wealth to the community.

The cigar making industry can well be cited as an example of how this would work out. In Janesville there are six cigar factories, each of which turns out a product that in its respective grade is not equaled by other makers. These six factories employ altogether, approximately thirty expert cigar makers. These men are paid an average weekly wage of $18.00, the year round. This money stays right here in the city and is put back into circulation in the form of taxes, many of the cigar makers being property owners; for merchandise and food-stuffs. Should every man who smokes identify himself with the "hooster spirit" that is in the air and ask for Janesville made cigars, instead of getting trust cigars, it wouldn't be long until we would have 100 cigar makers instead of 30. Proportionately this would be a splendid increase and one that means much to everyone in this city. It requires but little effort to ask for a Janesville made cigar, you get the best quality and your doing this helps bring that hundred cigar makers here. Isn't it worth asking for?

Ask for any one of the following named brands and you'll get a cigar that's as good and better in every respect as the one you smoke now.

Star of America, El Marco, Grand Duke, Twilight, Star Medal or Garmur, at 10c. Or if you smoke a nickel cigar ask for Dan Dunn, Little Garmur, Nabob, Red Cross, New City Hall, Exceptional of Romance.

Uphold Dignity of Work.

Never speak offensively of work; never disparage one's job in the hearing of a boy. A complaining sigh and a growling protest by the parent sink deep into the child's soul. He learns by it that work is some monster, with power to inflict punishment on those he loves. Such teaching is like ink on white silk—it never comes out.

Never allow the benefit, in some measure, to come back to the boy. Some part of the wage is his by the eternal law. It is supremely necessary to keep this connection inviolate. To break it once even will require ten times to cure. To work is to get pay, in some way, as surely as the sun is in the heavens. To oppress a child in the meanest cheating in this world.

PUCK'S SPIRIT IS TO BE OBSERVED

EVE OF ALL SAINTS DAY WILL SEE MANY STRANGE HAPPENINGS.

MYSTIC NIGHT OF WITCHES

Also of Gnomes, Elves, Sprites and Small Boys in At Hand—Old History.

Tonight is the one night in all the year when the serious routine of every day life is supposed to be turned topsy turvy. It is Halloween night, the night when fun and frolic hold high carnival, when witches, gnomes, and elves appear on earth once more in many guises; the night when the small boy throws off the reins of restraint, and, imitating the notorious Puck of old English days, proceeds to make the life miserable for those who have incurred his dire displeasure.

But while all will take some part, either small or great, in the celebration, there are few who stop to think of the old folk customs from which it originated. For the original Halloween, or one must hark back to the ancient Celts, to the autumn festival to the sun which the Druids celebrated at the harvest season with huge bonfires, and feasting, and to the Roman celebration in honor of Pomona, goddess of fruit and seeds. The Druids believed in the transmigration of the soul, and that on the eve of the autumn festival the wicked souls that during twelve months had been condemned to inhabit the bodies of animals were called together by Saman, the lord of death. While the Romans, Celts, and Druids were earliest in their observance of an autumn festival, it is to the happy hearted, laughter-loving children of Erin, however, that we owe the perpetuation of the mysterious customs incident to Halloween.

No Halloween frolic is complete without the tub for ducking for apples, the throwing of an apple paring over the head to see if it spells the name of your sweetheart, the cutting of the apple before the mirror, or, according to the old superstition, or looking into the well for the face of your true love.

All these are done with a laugh and a joke, without a thought that you are acting foolishly. But, way back, centuries ago, those same antics were serious things to the superstitious peasantry of England and the continent. That was the night when Puck, that mischievous sprite, was abroad, ready to pinch the toes of the servant girl who had been unruly, to turn milk sour, to rap on the windows, frightening the farmer and his wife; to run off with the bucket in the well; in fact, to do all the numerous deeds that the small boy of today loves to play on Halloween night.

ACCIDENT NARROWLY AVERTED IN ANSWERING FIRE ALARM

West Side Horse Cart Nearly Collides With Rig Which Got in Way of Approaching Department.

In answering a call from box number 312 to a fire in Riverview park near the Sheldahl's grocery on Dixon street, the west side horse cart narrowly escaped running into a farmer's rig in making the turn from Milwaukee to Main streets. The farmer had inadvertently got into the path of the approaching wagon and in an attempt to turn out of the way one of the horses on the cart slipped and fell. No damage was done however, and the horse quickly recovered its feet and the department proceeded with only a slight delay. The fire was extinguished with chemicals and the loss consisted in a badly burned porch. The fire evidently started in the leaves under the porch where the children had been playing with matches.

ROESLING BROS.

ELECTION NOTICE

To the Electors of Rock County, Wisconsin:

OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK, October 31, 1910

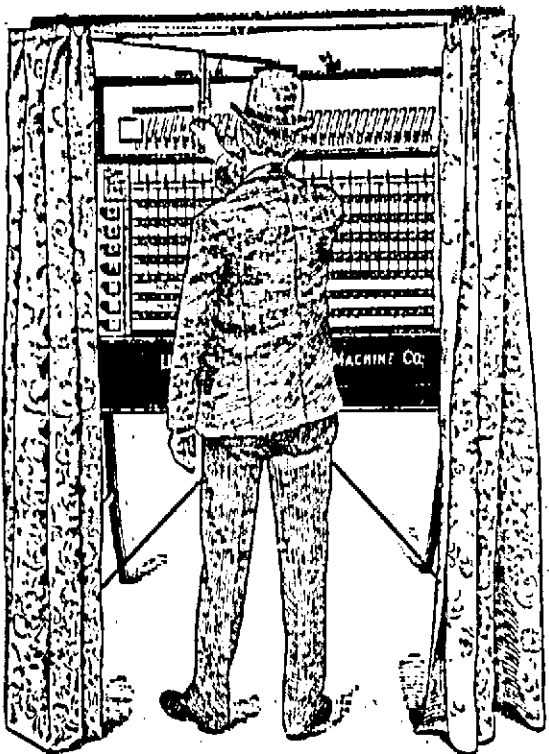

Information to Voters in Regard to the Election to Be Held On November 8th, 1910

Notice is hereby given that a general election is to be held in the several towns, wards, villages and election precincts in the county of Rock, on the 8th day of November, 1910, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The names of the candidates for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of the office, the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column together with the questions submitted to a vote.

DIRECTIONS FOR VOTING ON THE VOTING MACHINE: 1st. Close the curtain. 2d. Pull the Yellow Lever having on it the names of your political party over to the right until the Bell rings. (This will turn down the Pointers over the names of the candidates in your party.) 3d. If you wish to vote a Straight Party Ticket, leave the Pointers as they are (Down, in their voting position). But if you wish to "split," or "scratch," your ticket, turn up the Pointer from over the name of the candidate in your own party that you wish to cut out, and then turn Down the Pointer over the name of the candidate you wish to vote for for that office, and leave it there. 4th. Open the Curtain. NOTE—Unless you are sure that you know just how to operate the machine, it would be well for you to practice on some machine before election day.

HOW TO VOTE ON THE U. S. STANDARD VOTING MACHINE.

Move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the right as far as it will go. This will close the Curtain around you, and unlock the machine for voting.

VOTER ABOUT TO CLOSE THE CURTAIN.

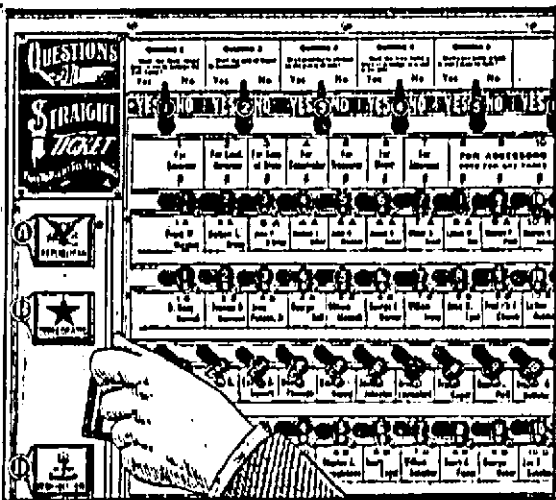

HOW TO VOTE ON QUESTIONS.

To vote Yes, turn the Question Pointer to the word Yes, leave it there. To vote No, turn the Question Pointer to the word No, and leave it there.

HOW TO VOTE A STRAIGHT TICKET.

Having closed the Curtain—Pull the Party Lever bearing the name or emblem of your Party over to the right UNTIL THE BELL RINGS, and then let it go back. This turns down to a voting position all of the Pointers of the candidates of your party.

The ringing of the bell signifies that the Party Lever has been pulled far enough to unlock the Curtain Lever and engage the registering mechanism.

VOTER PULLING OVER PARTY LEVER.

The turned down Pointers indicate the names of the candidates for whom the vote will be cast.

Leave the Pointers as they are (down in a voting position).

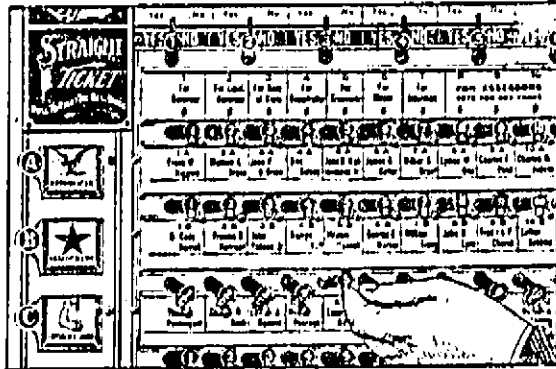

Move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the left as far as it will go.

This will count your vote, open the Curtain, and set the machine for the next voter.

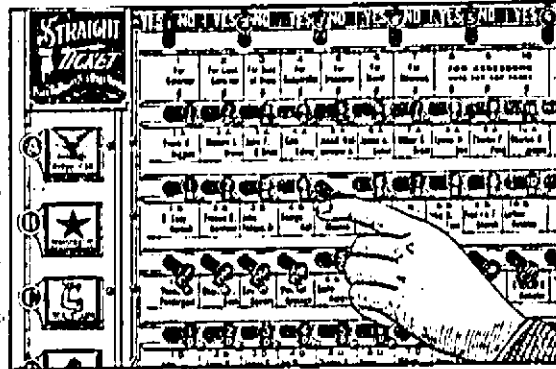

HOW TO VOTE A SPLIT TICKET.

Having closed the Curtain—Pull the Party Lever bearing the name or emblem of your Party over to the right UNTIL THE BELL RINGS, and then let it go back. This turns down to a voting position all of the Pointers of the candidates of your party.

Turn back (up) the Pointer from over the name of the candidate you wish to cut. See illustration below.

And then turn down a Pointer over the name of the candidate you wish to vote for for that office. See illustration below.

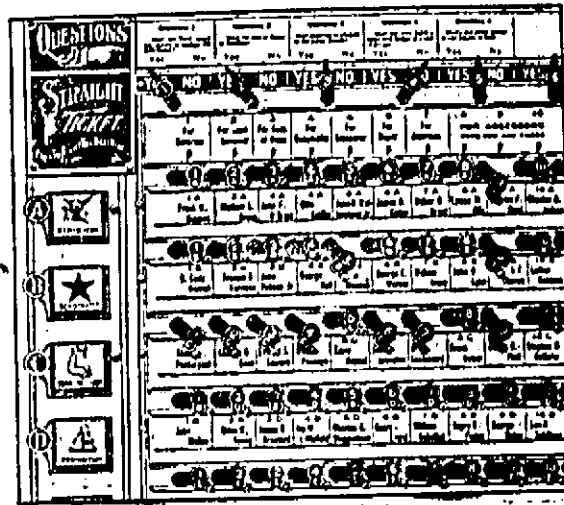

Be sure to complete each Split before making another.

For an office to which two or more candidates are to be elected, the required number of candidates can be voted for, and no more, regardless of position.

After the vote is arranged, move the Red Handle of the Curtain Lever to the left as far as it will go. This will count one vote for every candidate that has a Pointer left down over his name.

HOW TO VOTE ON QUESTIONS.

To vote Yes, turn the Question Pointer to the word Yes, and leave it there. To vote No, turn the Question Pointer to the word No, and leave it there.

THE ABOVE CUT SHOWS:

That the voter has voted Party Lever "C" and then—Split his vote for Treasurer, on Column 5. That he has voted for Assessors, voting for three on Column 3 (for which office he is permitted to vote for any three candidates on either of the Columns, 8, 9, and 10). That he has voted "Yes" on Questions 1 and 2. That he has not voted on Questions 3 and 5. That he has voted "No" on Question 4. If the voter desires, he may make any further changes while the Curtain remains closed, as the vote is not registered until the Curtain is opened. The Pointers must be left down over the names to be voted for. If the voter turns them back the vote will not be counted, as the opening of the Curtain turns back the Pointers and counts the vote.

NEW NEWS OF YESTERDAY

President Lincoln's "Fee-nance"
Ideas Given to Bankers.

He Thought Chase Knew How to Get the Money and Congress How to Direct Its Expenditure in Wise Fashion.

BY E. J. EDWARDS.

The late Gen. S. Coo, whose home was for many years in New Jersey, but whose business as a banker of national reputation was in New York, was, perhaps, more intimately associated as a financier with the administration of President Lincoln during its first two years than any of the other bankers who were called upon during that period to give or who volunteered advice to President Lincoln and his Secretary of the Treasury, Salmon P. Chase. It was Mr. Coo who, during the first year of Lincoln's presidency, pointed out to Secretary Chase the way in which the Treasury Department could secure fifty millions of dollars in gold.

At the time of the silver panic of 1893 Mr. Coo fell to speaking remissively about the financing done by the national government during the Civil War. I asked him how far Secretary Chase had followed the counsel of the leading bankers of Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Pittsburgh.

"Well, I can't tell you that," said Mr. Coo, smiling, "yet I do know that President Lincoln and Secretary Chase received financial counsel by the bushel-basket full, so to speak, from bankers all over the United States. But this counsel stopped all of a sudden, and I'm going to tell you of the incident that brought it to a close."

"President Lincoln had been urged to see a representative committee of bankers of the leading cities of the Union, which he at last consented to do. This was early in the second year of his administration and just before the national banking act had been passed by Congress. He received us, as I now remember it, in the cabinet room. He had on a loose coat and he wore carpet slippers. He was cordial enough, invited us to be seated, and then swung one of his long legs over an arm of his chair. So vigorously did he swing that leg that I thought every second he would lose its slipper."

"Now, gentlemen," he said, when we had all become seated, "I am ready to hear what you have to say, and I want every one of you who has an opinion to express to give it to me. When you have finished, I will tell you, in turn, what I think."

"Well, we started in," continued Mr. Coo, smiling broadly, "and you never heard such a curious conglomeration of financial views. Some of the committee were sure that the government, by adopting their plans, could instantly resume specie payment. Others wanted an irredeemable paper money issue. Still others insisted that we ought to sell millions of bonds abroad and secure two or three hundred millions of dollars in gold."

"The President listened patiently to what we had to say, and when at last it was apparent that we had talked ourselves dry, a whimsical look spread over his features. Then he began."

"Well, gentlemen," he said, "since I have been in this office I have heard a great deal about fee-nance." (That was the way he pronounced it.) "Before I came here my idea of fee-nance was that a man should pay his bills—earn enough money to pay them and have a little left over. That was the way I pruned fee-nance. That was the way I got my little cottage at Springfield, and I reckon, some three or four thousand dollars besides. But, as I have said, since I have been here I have heard all sorts of explanations about what is fee-nance. Some say this, and some say that, and some listen and say nothing at all."

"Now, I have heard you all patiently, and I am going to tell you something: I have come to the conclusion that I don't know a thing more about fee-nance than I did when I lived in Springfield, and I don't think you gentlemen know any more about it than I do. This is all the answer I have to make to what you have told me today except to say that I reckon Governor Chase, over at the Treasury Department, will know how to bring in all the money that he needs, and Congress knows enough to show us how to spend it according to law."

"This time Mr. Coo laughed outright. "Never again did the bankers bother Mr. Lincoln with their counsel," he added. "And as I look back on it I think that what he said to us that day was about the best lecture on finance I have ever heard."

French Agricultural Associations.

A most conservative estimate of the space devoted in the directories of the French and Algerian agricultural associations shows that there are over 6,000 individual societies. Numerous associations exist in each department of France, and they are grouped in the directory according to the department in which located.

Overconfidence Cured.

Young men are often warned to beware of overconfidence—the fault which makes them impudent, foolishly vain and often intolerable to their elders. But a little experience with life will soon knock overconfidence out of any youth, and the more of it he has the reader are his kindly fellow citizens to cure him of it.

FAC-SIMILE OF

OFFICIAL BALLOT

If you desire to vote an entire party ticket for state, congressional, legislative and county offices make a cross (X) or other mark in the circle (O) under the party designation at the head of the ballot. If you desire to vote for any particular person without regard to party, mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom you desire to vote if it be there, or write any name that you wish to vote for, in the proper place.

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk which must have indorsed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for.

If a voter wishes to vote for all the candidates nominated by any party he shall make a cross or other mark under the party designation printed at the top of the ballot in the circle made for that purpose. A ballot marked in this manner will be counted for all the candidates of that party in the column underneath, unless the names of some of the candidates of the party have been erased or a name shall be written in or a cross mark be placed in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom he intends to vote or by inserting or writing in the name of the candidate, marking a cross or mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate in another column. If the voter does not wish to vote for all the candidates nominated by one party, he shall mark his ballot by marking a cross or mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom he intends to vote or by inserting or writing in the name of the candidate.

A voter may vote upon a question submitted to a vote of the people by making a cross (X) or mark in the square at the right of the answer which he intends to give. The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot be spoiled, it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all shall be issued to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Unofficial ballots or memoranda to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth, and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter.

After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed indorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box, hand him his ballot to be placed in the box and pass out of the voting place.

A voter, who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, can have assistance of one or two election officers in marking same, to be chosen by the voter; and if he declares that he is totally blind, he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath in his discretion as to such person's disability. The following is a facsimile of the official ballot.

He has chased up a bed at headquarters and literally sleeps on the job. He is determined to rid the city of vice.

Birmingham, England, was the home of prize fighting when the ring was patronized by literature and royalty. There was Hendigo, who became an enemy to all unrighteousness. Home-made jam is gradually disappearing from the twentieth century European household. And yet 60 years ago George Sand, who treated most of her domestic duties somewhat lightly, was discovered by a visitor wearing a cotton dress and a big apron, and skinning a panful of fruit destined for the jam-pot. "It is not easy work," she remarked. "I find it harder to make good jam than to write 'Valentine' or 'Mauprat'; but there are some tasks one cannot leave to others."

"What Shall I Do For My Complexion?"

A reigning beauty in British aristocratic society asked of Sir Thomas Barlow, physician to King Edward's household, a medical paper "report":

"Take olive oil," Sir Thomas answered, "Live on it; live in it; live with it; eat it; drink it; dress your food with it and don't do without it."

As the result of following this advice the lady achieved her desire—a clear skin. Then she began to give beauty luncheons, in which olive oil was very prominent and those luncheons became very popular.

"Olive oil, though incapable of supporting life if taken alone, nevertheless lends itself to a diminished quantity of food, as it prevents waste of tissue. The warm, rosy complexion of the women from Southern France is due to the liberal use of olive oil, as much as to the air and climate of their country." From one to three tablespoonfuls spread over the day in different ways is quite sufficient to achieve this result.

Olive oil contains more nutriment than any other known food.

"Hot" olive oil is the finest brand on the market. It is guaranteed absolutely pure. Here exclusively, 15 pints, 25c; pints, 50c; quarts, 75c.

WOMAN'S PAGEThe Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON.

WHICH would you rather—What does that remind me of? Oh yes, I know—London Bridge—"which would you rather have, a gold house studded with diamonds or a gold pony cart and a milk white pony with gold shoes and a diamond harness?"

To return—which would you rather—hold a twenty dollar a week position by virtue of ability, or a forty dollar a week position by virtue of a good fortune?

Seems to me the logical answer to that is perfectly plain, and yet I know many men who virtually answer it the other way by worrying about a change of management.

I should think that any self-respecting man would be ashamed to worry about a change of management in his office.

For such a worry can mean but one thing—that he feels that his position depends partly on favor and not wholly on his ability to do his work.

Such a man probably thinks he is lucky in having a soft snap, but he isn't.

Quite the contrary.

Just the other day I heard a big business man say "There is no man I pity more than the man who is earning more than he is worth. He thinks he is lucky, but he really is just the opposite for he is always in line for a big job, and once he's adrift with his false estimate of himself and his bloated standard of living, there is no telling when he'll get a chance to anchor again."

Does your position depend wholly upon your ability to do the work?

If it does, no matter what you are getting, you have one big reason to be thankful. Admire, and emulate if you can, the man who is earning twice what you are because he has the brains to do so, but don't envy the man who is getting good money because he has a soft snap. Pity him.

And above all things don't worry about holding your position. If you want to worry, worry about being capable of doing the work as perfectly as it could be done.

Remember that no change of management ever affects the thoroughly good worker.

Even if it should, it wouldn't matter, for the whole world has need of him. As a wise philosopher of work puts it:

"If a man can write a better book, preach a better sermon or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, the world will make a beaten path to his door."

P. S. You may have noticed that I omitted to name the "wise philosopher of work." I did that for a good reason. I don't know his name and if anyone can tell me from whom that quotation is taken I will be very grateful, for I have never been able to place it. It is often ascribed to Emerson but the work is never cited, and the best Emerson scholar I know has been unable to find it in Emerson's writings. If anyone can give me some information on this subject he will greatly oblige.

THE KITCHEN MIND ON THE SMILE.

By MARY KENNELL.

One of the most interesting pages of recent magazine literature is one devoted to the reasons a number of men are possessed to the representative—give in answer to the question:

"What do you value most in your wife's cooking?"

"They are, along with the men, to be taken as representing, in the main, the attitude of the masculine mind towards that server of the strength of the nation—the cook."

There is a flavor of jocularity and perhaps a suspicion of insincerity in some of the answers. One man likes his "cook's" punctuality. Another appreciates abundance, one the fancy dishes which he calls "girl food."

The absent-minded man admires his wife for allowing him an opportunity to appreciate her labor in his behalf by placing a verbal label on the particular attention which he is to admire.

It seemed to think that an unusual trait but it is common to the ordinary household. Sometimes it works and sometimes it does not. Another man enjoys the opportunity it gives him to probe his wife three times a day. He rather excites the suspicious inquiry as to whether he always takes advantage of the opportunity. The "art" department of culinary service excites another individual who is devoted to "color schemes," and one admires his wife's ability to be delighted with his wife's ability to disguise "made-overs." This is a stroke of absolute genius, which it is to be hoped is duly appreciated.

The two men who strike a real keynote of happiness are a lawyer and a coal dealer. The first said he admired his wife's "ability to rise above her work." He "hinted a kitchen-minded woman," and while he likes a well-cooked meal, he admits that there are "higher, brighter interests."

The man who can admit that is worth cooking for, but to most men the food problem is of prime importance from more than the standpoint of the economist. The last man—the coal dealer—strikes a higher note than any of the others. His reply is so full of truth and real value that it is worth quoting. The greatest thing about his wife's cooking, he averred, was: "Her jollity at it."

It does not seem to work any miracle with the man who reads his newspaper and grows between bites, at least you will make pleasant lines with which to combat old age. Save your pleasant story for meal time. Wear dainty gowns if possible. Neat ones are obligatory upon the self-respecting woman. Smile and be pleasant and you will be happier—if not happy. Don't be discouraged if you get small results. The day of miracles may not have passed, but they don't seem to be as spontaneous as of yore and you'll make it if you don't give up.

The man who appreciates the smile and is not afraid to say so, is a fine fellow and I wonder that his particular "cook" thinks that there is no one like him. Perhaps it is partly due to his ability to appreciate smiles that the smiles always await him. He is doubtless a "good fellow" himself, but it is worth trying on any kind of a husband.

The KITCHEN CABINET

It is good, except he has made no by living? —St. Augustine.

Laughter is the sun that drives winter from the human face. —Victor Hugo.

Palatable Liver.

Lamb's or calf's liver is not a dish to be despised. The common method of serving it fried with bacon is very appetizing if well cooked; but one likes variety even in serving liver.

Try this way and see how choice a dish it is: Fry three slices of salt pork until brown, lay in the liver and sear well on both sides, then put into a covered baking dish with a few potatoes parboiled, a few carrots and an onion that has been fried brown in the pork fat. If you have a little broth or stock pour it over the meat and vegetables, if not use boiling water, cover and cook for several hours until the vegetables are tender. Serve in the casserole. Season when the dish is about half cooked.

Another nice way to serve liver is to wrap a piece of bacon around each piece of liver after seasoning well and rolling in flour then bake in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp. Turn once during the cooking. Liver with curry sauce is another way to add variety to its serving. Cook the liver as usual, adding a bit of onion to the fat for flavor. Remove the liver and add two tablespoonfuls of flour, a half teaspoonful of curry powder and a cup of stock. Strain over the liver and serve with rice.

Things Worth Knowing.

When a stitch is dropped in a fine silk stocking which will cause "rall-rounding" wet the place to arrest any further damage and then it will go no further and the place may be darned when the stocking is removed. Stockings that have been dipped in water and dried before wearing will not be so apt to drop stitches.

Try using varnished paper as covering for shelves; it is easily wiped and kept clean.

To clarify fat, add a raw potato cut in small pieces to the fat and allow it to heat gradually. When the potatoes are well browned remove them and strain the fat through a cheese cloth.

The potato absorbs any odors and collects some of the sediment, the remainder sinks to the bottom of the kettle.

ELECTRIC LAMP SHADE

Clamps on Globe of Incandescent Light at Any Angle Desired.

An objection that has hitherto been raised to incandescent electric lamps is that there has been no satisfactory way to shade them. A Kentucky man has overcome this difficulty by the invention of a most ingenious shade that can be clamped on the lamp in a twinkling and in any position desired. The shade consists of a metal disk bent into a cup-like form and provided at its center with a spring device adapted to press against the globe and hold the device in position. As will readily be understood this shade can be fastened in any position.

DANGER IN FASTING.

Upton Sinclair tells in a magazine article how extreme Fletcherism proved injurious in his case, as Metchnikoff says it must, but how wonderfully he has been benefited by fasting. He warns all of the dangers of fasting without guidance or in the company of friends who will discourage. He could tell of cases of death from fasting, and many cases of permanent injury have come to my notice. This is not denying the value of Fletcherism or of Deweyism, but suggesting that cases differ. A nervous person, much under weight, should not fast, and no one without advice.

SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. AUGUSTE VERNERMAN, De Forest, Wis.

De Forest, Wis.—"After an operation four years ago I had pains down in both sides, backache, and a weakness. The doctor wanted me to have another operation. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I am entirely cured of my troubles."

Another Operation Avoided.
New Orleans, La.—"For years I suffered from severe female troubles. Finally I was confined to my bed and the doctor said an operation was necessary. I gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial first, and was saved from an operation."—Mrs. L. J. PERRY, 1111 Kerleree St., New Orleans, La.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases. The great volume of unsolicited testimony constantly pouring in proves conclusively that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a remarkable remedy for those distressing feminine ills from which so many women suffer.

NOTHING IN THE JOB

ONE MAN THAT NO LONGER HAS ANY DESIRE TO BE HIS OWN BOSS.

FOUND FLY IN OINTMENT.

Things, Somehow, Didn't Turn Out Just as He Imagined They Would—Moral Not Too Deeply Concealed in Anecdote.

"No," said the painter, "I ain't my own boss any more."

"Why not?" asked his friend. "I remember seeing you a couple of weeks ago and you were wild with enthusiasm over getting away from wage slavery and beginning to work for yourself. You seemed to be doing fine. What was wrong?"

"Well, I was enthusiastic about it two weeks ago. You see I wasn't hep then. I'd been working for other fellows all my life and had been kicking myself because I was another man's man. Another man had the right to tell me where I got off at eight hours every day, and that's what stung. I wanted to be for myself, wanted to be free."

"I began to save money. I saved till I had $50. 'Ah,' says I to myself, 'no for my own business.' I quit and began looking for a job to do on my own hook. I found it, painting a sign over one side of a big brewery. Three hundred bucks, and it was a cinch to pull it off. One week with two men. I went down town, bought some brushes and paint and a scaffold and rope, and went out and hired two of the lads who'd been working with me. I'm a contractor now, see?"

"My own man. Nobody can tell me what to do or how to do it or when to start or quit work. Fine, oh, fine!"

"The second day my two men don't show up. Instead a kid comes down and tells me they had gone fishing for a couple of days. I chase myself around to headquarters and get two new men. Men I didn't know. They worked all right all day, and at night they want their pay—got to have it. Me not having ten bucks in my pocket, I try to draw on the brewery. 'O, say,' says they. 'When the job is complete we pay you, not until. I go and tell the boys how it is. 'We got to have the dough,' they say. 'You're a h— of a boss if you can't pay your men. We'll have to let 'em know 'bout you down at headquarters.' Finally I soak my watch to get 'em their money."

"They don't show up in the morning, either, so I have to do the man hunt over again. I get two more and we start all right, and then the superintendent of the brewery comes out and says: 'Horse, those letters are only twenty-foot and the job calls for twenty-five.' 'No, it don't,' I say. 'Twenty in what it says on the contract.' 'Five dollars it's twenty-five,' he says. I take his bid. Then we get out the paper and see. It was twenty-five all right. We had to start the job over again. My mistake."

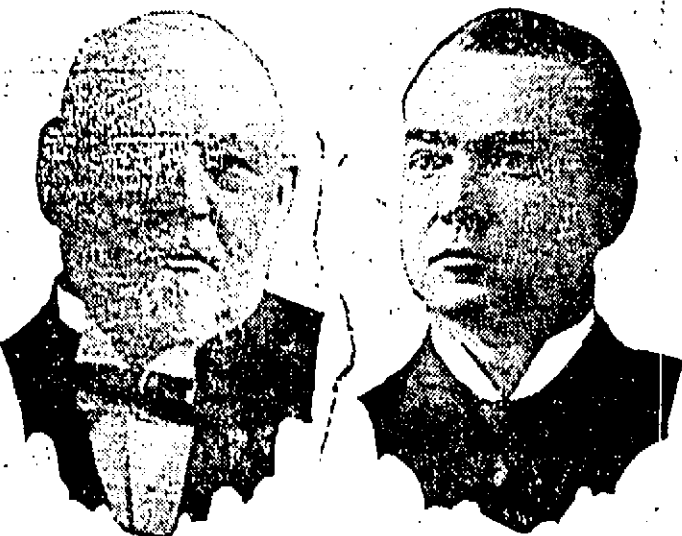

"The fifth day on the job my two men, who're drawing full pay every night, come to me and say they've got to have something in advance. 'Well, here it is,' I said, and I drives one of 'em in the jaw."

"I got a nice friendly contractor to take the job off my hands, and he only charged me $50 for the work that I'd already got done for him. Oh, it's all right to be your own boss, but when you're the boss of other guys too, it's for me. If I ever see a chance to get in business for myself again I'll run like a deer."

Left Over.
Barbara, aged four, had always been allowed to make small cakes out of the scraps of dough left from the morning's baking, so one morning after being sent to gather eggs, she came running in with a very tiny one and exclaimed, "Oh, mamma! see this little egg. It must be that's all the dough the hen had left!"—Dellmeator.

Acme of Real Stupidity.
It is claimed that in his boyhood Shakespeare was so stupid that he did not know enough to come in out of the rain. Perhaps through this stupidity he got so wet that he became the great intellectual ocean whose waves touch the shores of all thought.

NATIONAL
COMPANY

Well, you're mistaken. Many's the time I've dodged round corners to avoid meeting men I knew would invite me to have dinner or luncheon or a drink—of soda—or something—for fear they'd find out that I couldn't treat in return. Many a time I've gone hungry for days and weeks and slept on park benches until an old friend found me and took me home with him."

She eyed him with attention.

"But it's your father I wanted to talk about," he hurried on. "I'd bet a lot he knows more than any other man in this town, and, besides, he's a fine, square, good hearted old gentleman. Anybody can see that. Only he's got one terrible fault—he doesn't know how to make money. And that's mighty tough on you—though it's just as tough on him. But when you roast him for it, as you did just now, you only make him feel as miserable as a yellow dog, and that doesn't help matters a little bit. He can't change into a sharp business crook now; he's too old a man. Before long he won't be with you at all, and what he's gone you'll be more on yourself sure if you keep on throwing it into him the way I heard you, and that's on the level."

"I won't do it again," she faltered, twisting her hands together.

"Bully for you!" he cried and, with an abrupt if artificial assumption of his job. "The first intimation that he had of anything seriously amiss was when he entered, following Pete.

Pete Wilkins, sheriff and born drunkard, is the best natured man in the world, as a general rule. Drunk or sober, Radville tolerates him for just that quality. On only two occasions is he irritable and unmanageable—when his wife gets after him about the drink and when he has a duty to perform in his official capacity.

Tall, gaunt, gangling and loose jointed, Duncan, returning to the store from lunch, found Pete standing in the middle of the floor, hands in pockets and a noisome stogy thrust into a corner of his mouth.

"I'm sorry about this, Sam," he belated, "but there ain't no use wasting words 'bout it. I'm here on business."

"But what's the matter, sheriff?" Graham asked, his voice breaking.

"Ah, you know you got a note due at the bank, don't you?"

"Yes, but—"

"Well, it's protested. I understand that, don't you? I'm here to serve the papers on you."

"But—there must be some mistake," Sam clutched blindly for his hat. "I'll step over and see Mr. Lockwood. He's always been kind, very kind."

"Now!" Pete bawled. "Mr. Lockwood don't want to see you unless you can settle. You can save yourself the trouble. You got up or get out. I got orders from him soon's I got judgment to close 'y' up. And that goes, see?"

"To—turn me out of the store, Pete?" Graham's world had slipped from beneath his feet. He was overwhelmed. And it was with a child's look of pitiful dismay and perplexity that he faced the sheriff.

The father who has fallen short of his child's trust and confidence knows that look. To Duncan his appeal was irresistible. He had his hand in his pocket, clutching the still considerable remains of what Kellogg had termed his grubstake, before he knew it.

"But—there must be some mistake," Graham repeated pleadingly. "It can't be, Mr. Lockwood surely wouldn't—"

"Now, there ain't no use whining about it!" Wilkins roared him into silence. "Law is law, and—"

He ceased quickly, surprised to find Duncan standing between him and his prey.

"What?" he began.

"Wait!" Duncan touched him gently on the chest with a forefinger, at the same time catching and holding the sheriff's eye. "Are you, he inquired quietly, "laboring under the impression that Mr. Graham is deaf?"

"What?"

"Duncan turned to Sam apologetically. "He said 'what.' Did you hear it, sir?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

CHAPTER XII.

DUNCAN went home for his midday meal. It wasn't much of a walk from Sam Graham's store to Miss Carpenter's, and he didn't mind in the least.

On this particular day he was sincerely hungry, but he had much to think about besides, and between the two he just bolted his food and made off hotfoot for the store.

Naturally, knowing nothing about Sam's note, although he knew Pete Wilkins by sight as the sheriff and town drunkard in one, it didn't worry him at all to discover that gentleman tacking toward the store as he hurried up Beech street, eager to get back to his job. "The first intimation that he had of anything seriously amiss was when he entered, following Pete.

Pete Wilkins, sheriff and born drunkard, is the best natured man in the world, as a general rule. Drunk or sober, Radville tolerates him for just that quality. Skunks Out of Season.

If you are harboring a skunk on your premises you'd better look up your local skunk law. It seems there are certain things you can't do relative to the possession of a skunk, even though you are treating him well. That is to say, you can't go as far as you like. We always supposed the skunk able to take care of himself, but it seems that the laws of New York have stepped in to assist him. One Henry Gurnsey of Geneva has been arrested and fined for having skunks in his possession out of season. He said he posed a skunk was a skunk any old time of year, and if he wanted to run a little skunk farm on the side, a posed he had a perfect right to. He, compromised, and let the skunks go, but the neighbors, who are wearing clothes "plum" on their noses, say they wish the darn law would mind its own business.—Boston Herald.
